Notes Management

Comments don't exist in MAX the way they did in the legacy system. MAX is designed to automatically save a history of all services, activities, and events related to the customer. Because a customer's Service History is systematically recorded, including what was done, when, and by whom, the need to add comments about customer services has been significantly reduced.

MAX users should always consider Service History as the main resource to research or review previous account activities. MAX users will see an optional Notes field included in many services, functions, and on the vehicle record. The optional Notes should be used only when supplemental details that are not already saved by MAX need to be recorded and attached to the customer record and history.

Notes should be used very judiciously, with these guidelines:

- Using Notes should be the exception, not the rule, because MAX records all activity related to services (what, when, why, and who)
- Notes are captured in the database and as such are part of the record
- Think carefully before you add a Note. It can become part of a legal case
- Keep Notes thorough, but brief. They have a maximum length of 300 characters
- Don't use acronyms, abbreviations, or codes in Notes
- Don't state the obvious, especially if the info is already being captured by MAX
- Notes are not formatted or edited like a word processor- what you enter is what you get
- Ask yourself, is my Note adding value beyond just me? If the answer is no, then a Note should not be saved
