NRVC Processing

The Non-Resident Violator Compact (NRVC) is a United States interstate agreement between 44 states and Washington, D.C., used to process non-compliance to traffic citations across state borders. NRVC allows participating states to alert and share information with Motor Vehicle Administrators when a resident of one state did not comply with citation terms. The home state will suspend the driver's license until the driver takes care of the matter in the other state.

The NRVC Processing function in MAX allows the appropriate central services groups within MVD to quickly add an NRVC record in MAX which then can be shared with the state the violator is from. For example, if someone was visiting Arizona from Colorado and got a speeding ticket and failed to pay the fine or failed to appear, the court would send information to MVD about the failure to comply. MVD would enter the violation data in NRVC Processing and the information would be shared via an interface with Colorado.

Upon notice of citation non-compliance, the NRVC is placed on the customer record by the Records Unit, and the Division will initiate suspension of said customer's driving privilege. The NRVC suspension will remain in effect until the nonresident violator complies with the citing jurisdiction's requirements.

Procedure for Issuing State

When a motorist fails to comply with the terms of a traffic citation, the appropriate official shall report the "Failure to Comply" to the licensing authority of the state in which the traffic citation was issued. On receipt of the report, the licensing authority of the issuing state shall transmit, to the licensing authority in the home state of the motorist, the information in a form and content as contained in the compact manual.

- The licensing authority of the issuing state need not suspend the privilege for whom a report has been transmitted
- The licensing authority of the issuing state shall not transmit a report on any violation if the date of transmission is more than six months after the date the citation was issued
- The licensing authority of the issuing state shall not transmit a report in any violation where the date of issuance of the citation predates the most recent of the effective dates of entry for the two states affected

Procedure for Home State

On receipt of failure to comply, the Division shall notify the motorist and initiate a suspension action until satisfactory evidence of compliance with the terms of the traffic citation has been furnished to the Division.

- The Division shall maintain a record of actions taken and make reports to issuing state as provided in the compact manual
- Due process safeguards will be accorded

In order to satisfy a NRVC, the customer must have one of the following:

- Court abstract
- Letter from the out-of-state court stating the citation has been resolved

If neither is available, the customer must contact the out-of-state court for the appropriate document.

A $10.00 reinstatement fee will need to be collected at time of reinstatement.

The provisions of this compact shall not apply to parking or standing violations, highway weight limit violations and violations of law governing the transportation of hazardous materials.
